

Testimonial of Jose Mancía

The day I was most afraid of happened eight days before Thanksgiving 2009. My son was taken out of my house by his mother, who for the better part of five years was absent from his life. She believed that from that day on she would take over his life and keep me out of it.

After the initial shock, my wife and family urged me to take action and fight for what was right. I was scared but this was one battle worth fighting. The following days I searched for lawyers online. Some websites were flashy and appealing to the eye but I felt no connection to the lawyer. I needed to make a final, comfortable choice. My search led me to the website of Edwards & Associates and it immediately calmed my mind. There were testimonials, videos, advice and brochures to print out. The staff had bios, pictures and personality. The website was easy to navigate and after a couple clicks, I was writing an email asking for a consultation. Much to my surprise, the very next business day I had my first consultation with Saralyn Stewart.

Saralyn eased my mind and talked to me as a friend not a client. She heard my story, took notes and promised me that she would do everything in her power to help me get my son back. She filed for an emergency hearing and followed up by making sure that the courts had indeed received the filing. Within a couple of days, on Thanksgiving eve, our case was being heard in front of the Judge. As nervous as I was, deep down I knew that Saralyn was going to plead my case as best as she could and prove to the judge that I was the rightful primary parent.

When the Judge reached his verdict, I teared from joy and embraced my friend, Saralyn with a hug and a thousand thank yous.

Three months have now passed since my final hearing and Lisa, Jessica and Saralyn have individually reached out to me to make that I am still happy. I thank them endlessly each time we speak for their support, advice and friendship.
